SOME OF THE OLD RESIDENTS OF MASON.
By Addison S. Bean.

Seventy-three years ago this summer the first clearing was made in what is now the town of Mason, by Cyrus Mills, who cleared a large piece of land and planted corn and sowed rye, which were staple crops in those days. Two years later he built a log house on the interval now owned by Nathan G. Mills. He afterward built a frame house and large barn near where Nathan's buildings now stand. He raised a family of twelve children, nine boys and three girls, who all grew to man and womanhood. He was a good farmer; always raised large crops, and lived on what he raised. kept a large stock of cattle and sheep; the wool was carded and spun and made into wearing apparel for the family by the wife and mother. In those days almost every housewife had her set of cards and loom and made the cloth for the men's trousers and frocks, and finer cloth for the girls' clothing. I well remember seeing those great girls coming to school with their checked gowns of homespun of which they were prouder than people are now of their cassimeres and silks, and much more comfortable. Uncle Cyrus spent his winters in the woods in the eastern part of the state, leaving the boys to care for things at home. As the boys grew to manhood he took some of them with him. He was as good as a lawyer. His counsel was often sought in difficult lawsuits, and hardly a case was lost that he took hold of. When a boy the writer took a job to cut cedar posts for a man, and was to go to another for his pay. After doing the job he went and the man paid him in a few days. The sheriff arrested him for getting the money under false pretences. He told Uncle Cyrus just how it was, and after hearing the case all through, he said "Gorry! I'll fix him!" and he did. He took the case and made out the man a liar and a fraud at the court. The bill was less than three dollars, but cost him over forty to get out of it. Mills would not take a cent for his trouble. When a boy many a night did I listen to the hairbreadth escapes he had gone through with some huge bear up a tree or in a trap, or when he chased a big buck deer or moose over some high precipice where he jumped more than forty feet, or slid on his snow-shoes down some ledge onto a big deer. Then when he was helping Sherman lot out the town, Sherman once got a little too much out of the "little brown jug" going up a hill with his compass with Mills just ahead, they had to pull themselves up by the bushes. Mills passed up and as Sherman was pulling up he unnoticed cut the bush just as Sherman clutched it, and Sherman went rolling down many feet, compass and all. Again, when he was crossing a brook on some poles, Mills cut them, so Sherman went flourishing into the water on a cold winter day. He liked fun and could make as much as any man living. Some time in the fifties, when he buried his wife, he sold the old farm to his son Nathan, and built a new set of buildings just over the Bethel line, and married the widow Fride of Sweden. They lived happily for several years, when he was afflicted with a cancer from which he died in 1896. He was a kind and indulgent father, a good neighbor, and true friend and citizen.

The second settler was Ashley Paine; he came from Dublin, N.H., and married Betsey Morse of Bethel. He began to clear his farm the next year after Mills, but owing to the loss of crops by fire, did not move on at it as soon. He raised two children, a son and daughter. The daughter married Amos P. Bean, of Berlin, N. H., who enlisted in Company H, 13th Maine Volunteers, and died at New Orleans, February 1st, 1863. The son married Abbie Wheeler and settled on the home farm, where they lived happily for many years, when the wife died. Their mother had died several years before. He then married a sister of his first wife and settled in Marlborough, Mass., where he fell from the roof of a house where he was working, and was killed in 1892.

Mr. Paine was a Methodist, and before there was a place built for worship, held meetings in his house. He built what was called a block house; the timber was all hewed square and dovetailed together at the corners. Mr. Paine was a hard working man; never turned a deaf ear to the needy; his house was always open. Sixty-three years ago the writer of this article lost his mother, and Mr. Paine took him in, and cared for him as his own son, clothed, fed and schooled him until he could care for himself. Several years ago he told me that he had mowed the grass on a certain piece of ground for sixty-two years in succession. As years went past, the old block house gave place to a more modern one; the big barn also gave place to a modern one, and there was always a good stock of cattle and sheep. In the winter we all made baskets which Mr. Paine took to Portland every spring to exchange for a year's supply of groceries. He bought no flour, but raised wheat which he had ground near home. In those days we had no canned salmon, but plenty of trout and deer. But times have changed; the writer is now past his three score years and will soon be where the bugle will not disturb his slumbers. He served his country over four years in the late rebellion. Mr. Paine died in September, 1897. He was 94 years of age.

Heart Disease Cured
By Dr. Miles' Heart Cure.

Fainting, Weak or Hungry Spells, Irritable or Intermittent Pulse, Flushing or Choking Sensation, Shortness of Breath, Swelling of Feet and Ankles, are symptoms of a diseased or weak heart.

Mr. N. C. MILLER.
Of Port Wayne, Ind., writes on Nov. 20, 1894: "I was afflicted for forty years with heart trouble and suffered untold agony. I had weak, hungry spells, and my heart would palpitate and beat so fast that I could not sleep. I was treated by several physicians without relief and gave up being well again. About two years ago I commenced using Dr. Miles' Remedies. One bottle of the Heart Cure stopped all my troubles and the Restorative Nervine did the rest and now I sleep soundly and attend to my household and social duties without any trouble."

Over the female mosquito bites. Though it is asserted that she carries poison, the fact has never been proved; no venom glands have been discovered. Her sting consists of five extremely sharp points, two of which are barbed. They unite to form an awl, which, having inflicted the puncture, serves as a tube for sucking the blood of the victim.
It is not true that flies are enabled to walk on the ceiling by means of sucking disks. Each of the six feet is provided with a pair of little cushions and two hooks. The cushions are covered with hairs which are kept moist by a secretion causing them to adhere to a smooth surface. The hooks help the insects to walk over rough surfaces.

THE BLOODHOUND'S SCENT.
One Who Knows Says It Has Been Overestimated.

Hon. R. H. Ghinn, formerly of New Orleans, now in Vassarville, Conn., well known in St. Louis, had this to say to a Star-Sayings reporter about bloodhounds and trail dogs a few days ago: "I have yet to meet the first man who ever saw a bloodhound in our southern country. They are too ferocious, for domestic purposes and are not trace dogs."

I carried some a few years ago to the island of Cuba. The silver bloodhound and an English bloodhound pup. The government officials had the former caged with lashed iron bars before allowing him to land, on account of his ferocious appearance. He was very tame on my plantation and on an iron muzzle placed on him, and even then the fear of his doing serious damage caused him to be killed. The English pup for the same reason was sent to the Lyons brevery for safe keeping.

"The foxhound, a lazy, worthless dog apparently, is the trail dog, trained to pursue fugitives in the woods. I had such a dog. The mode of training was to put him in a room, to be fed and handled by only one person, until grown. Then, after being scented by the trail dog, a bone with a little meat was given him while grazing. This bone his trainer fought him with his hat, took the bone from him; went some distance, and climbed a tree. The dog, upon being released, took his trail and traced him. Being treated in the same way the next day, the trainer took the bone a mile off and was trailed. The dog was then trained to follow his master's lead. Any dog who was missing it was only necessary to give the dog a small piece of any portion of his wearing apparel and tell him 'hunt the man.' He was off running in the woods. The dog was not in his pursuit he would run over small children, between the legs of larger ones, his head close to the ground, perfectly oblivious to all impediments. The dog was trained to follow his master's lead. Any dog who was missing it was only necessary to give the dog a small piece of any portion of his wearing apparel and tell him 'hunt the man.' IN HUB MARKETS. A PRIMITIVE RACE.

Stock of Butter in Storage Has Increased.

Beef, Mutton and Lamb Vary Dull. Grain About Steady—Live Stock and Wool Markets.

Boston, Aug. 3.—There is no scarcity of fresh meat in the market, but only a few special makes in assorted stock packages are good enough to mark with the fresh meat northern at this season. They are, with few exceptions, affected by the warm weather, and have to be classed with fresh.

The stock in cold storage was increased last week 871 tubs, and on Saturday stood at 183,382 tubs against 728,728 tubs some time last year, an increase of 50,587 tubs. The receipts are gradually falling off, but they are still enough to keep the current consumption, including all grades, and the accumulations are likely to continue during August unless there is a great shrinkage in the receipts.
